

The airwaves are a public good that the government should and must regulate to insure that they serve the public interest and that Americans can receive a broad diversity of voices, opinions, and content. Further media consolidation would lead to a continuing narrowing of this diversity. Therefore, I urge you to retain current ownership rules, or even to further strengthen them rather than weaken them.